“ I will always remember Nana Abi with a fond heart overflowing with love. I knew her as my grandmother. She was warm, cute, huggable and loved to laugh. We adored seeing her laugh and, as we grew older, we took every opportunity we could to make her. I remember her giggle. How she would recoil into herself when we tried to tickle her and kiss her on the neck: her tickle spot. Towering over her, we would grab her into a tight hug, lift her off the ground and carry her around the room. She was our Nana and there was no limit to showing love.

One dinner time when we were passing around the chicken and I made a lame joke about her not wanting a drum but preferring the guitar. That left her entertained for a long time after as she would retell it to me.

Nana Abi was the holiest "everyday" person I have ever known. She allowed God into her life in a way I aspire to everyday. She made it look easy! Her dedication made her happy from the inside and she had an amazing outlook on life. Even coming from where she did and the hardship she went through, she had a positivity that leaves me in admiration and awe.

I have missed Nana Abi for some years now and I'm glad she's finally with Papa Joe. I know they're loving each other's company once again as they begin their new lives eternally together in the promised land. I pray they remember to look down on us every now and then with pride at the legacy they left behind.

I love you Nana Abi. Goodbye for now. Azzezzit Nana.
