“ My favorite memories of my Aunt Mae are seeing her every holiday or gathering in my parents kitchen. They always enjoyed playing cards together while picking on one another cracking jokes. Her and her sister (my grandma Marge) were hilarious. A lot of people don't know this but that last day at the nursing home (where they shared a room) my mom was feeding aunt Mae lunch while I was feeding grandma. Aunt Mae was not in the best mood and was using some "not nice language" and my grandma (who could care less about the language she used) told her "Mae watch your language." I was shocked but was giggling because even though sisters often bicker I often believe they also brought out the best in each other. We never would have thought my grandma would have passed away just a short 3 hours later. And it's just so bizarre to me that aunt Mae passed away exactly 5 months to the day from her younger sister. I'm sad in knowing I won't see her again but at peace knowing that all sisters are reunited at last. I'll miss you Aunt Mae and look forward to the day where I can squeeze you both again. I love you.

I was not able to make my mothers funeral on Thursday, April 30, But I was able to watch it live from my home in Kansas. I want to thank Kristy for the thoughts that she shared and for those that was able to be there to send Mom on to her next great journey. From the deepest part of my heart, I thank you all!! Mom I will always live you, until we see each other again, your oldest son, Monty.
