“ *How lucky we are to have something that makes saying goodbye so hard. Grief is the price we pay for love.
In memory of a life so beautiful lived a heart so deeply loved.
My heart is broken because I can't understand why someone so precious had to die.
Lisa you will be missed.
Heaven got another Angel.

“ Lisa you will be missed. Your personality was contagious and your smile filled the room. I met Lisa at the First Baptist Church when our youngest were babies. We both happened to take them to the nursery and stay with them. Basically from that moment she was a part of my path in life, we did Bible study together and somehow we would always run into each other at the store, at the salon or in town. She had a spirit that could never be forgotten. Later on I found out that she had been a dental assistant and one of my best friends had previously worked with her. Such a small world. When the opportunity presented itself she came to work with me at the office I'm at. We commuted together and shared many stories about our lives. I got to know her on another level, she had a huge heart. She was funny to say the least , had energy that I could never relate to & gave us the best laughs at work that I will never forget. She loved her kids and grandkids with her whole heart & would do anything for them. Lisa you will always remain in my memories as a free spirit and one heck of a lady. My heart aches for your family and I hope they know you will be watching over them daily 💕

“ I was 11 or 12 when I first met Lisa, as Julie is my best friend, she use to give us so much "grief" in high school & she always called me "Gerstine"... I can still hear her saying it now ❤️ But with the grief she also made us laugh... listening to the family jukebox, listening to Beastie Boys blaring from her boombox strapped to her VW glovebox, threatening Julie & I to be quiet so she could sleep, only causing us to giggle even more, being cool because she was older & we got to go to her apartment parties.... so many more memories ❤️ one of the things I'll remember most, probably what comes to everyone's mind that ever met her was her smile, she smiled with her whole face ❤️ even though I won't physically see her smile on earth, I won't ever forget it, & I'm blessed knowing that Lisa became a woman of faith & I'll see her again someday & that gives me comfort 🙏
