“ This reflection is perhaps eight years late but only worse than late is never. On August 18, 2017 I was in Turlock for the burial of Assyrian ultranationalist leader William Shimon Dadesho. When his casket was being lowered into the ground, they played Linda George’s patriotic song “Ana Atra Litlee” which means “I Have No Country.” That experience and memory had a profound effect. It was a very difficult reminder of how the contemporary Assyrian experience is an ongoing struggle and an aftermath of genocide and massacre. Though I was born here in California, Assyria is the motherland for all of us. May God bless Rabi William and may God bless Assyria.
